Ebbe Jensen named National Security Compliance Manager for Veolia Transportation
Will Retain Current Position as Southeast Region Director of Safety

Lombard, IL – February 10, 2014 – Ebbe Jensen has been named National Safety and Security Compliance Manager for Veolia Transportation, where he will have overall responsibility for safety and security at approximately 100 Veolia contract locations nationwide. Mr. Jensen will also retain his current position as Director of Safety for Veolia’s Southeast Region, based in Columbia, South Carolina.

Mr. Jensen began his career in transit as a coach operator for SCANA Corporation in Columbia in the early 1990s, and held a series of responsible positions until becoming Operations Supervisor for Atlantic Express of South Carolina in 2000. In 2001 he joined Veolia Transportation in Columbia as an Operations Supervisor, and was quickly named Safety and Training Manager, a position he held until 2010, when he was promoted to Southeast Regional Director of Safety. In this position he is responsible for overall safety systems, risk assessment and claims handling in the region, as well as staffing, training, and compliance with local and DOT policies and procedures.

Mr. Jensen studied child psychology and human behavior in Denmark, and has an associate degree from Continental Bible College in Brussels, Belgium. He has a long string of Transit Safety Institute certifications, including bus operator training, system security, transit emergency management, and collision investigation. He is also certified NIMS 300 and 400 instructor and has completed the NIMS 100, 200, 700, 800, 300 and 400 courses. He is Passenger Service and Safety (PASS)-certified by the Community Transportation Association of America, and has a master instructor certification from Veolia Transportation. Mr. Jensen was a member of SCANA Corporation’s first Cultural Diversity Team in the early 1990s. He is fluent in Danish and has lived in South Carolina for the past 26 years.
