

Veolia Transportation has changed its name to Transdev

Matthew Wood Joins Transdev North America as a Vice President of Business Development

Lombard, IL – September 10, 2014 – Transdev Senior Vice President of Business Development Dick Alexander, announced that Matthew Wood has joined the Transdev team as a Vice President of Business Development. Wood is a seasoned professional in public transit and served in both business development and operational management capacities in various organizations.

In his new role, Wood will focus on the continued growth of Transdev as the largest private-sector operator of multiple modes of transit. He will have a primary focus on further developing the transit and paratransit businesses as well as the IntelliRide business, which offers brokered transportation for Medicaid, student and ADA-certified persons with disabilities.

In making the announcement Alexander said, “Matt is an experienced leader and well respected in the industry. His passion for working with and offering innovative solutions to clients is a true asset. He brings a wealth of knowledge to ensure that we continue to provide the safest, highest quality service to our clients and passengers.”

Prior to joining Transdev (previously Veolia Transportation), Wood most recently served as Managing Partner of the Transit Access Group, a national transportation and logistics consulting company. Wood’s prior experience also includes serving as a member of First Transit’s executive leadership as Senior Vice President for the Transit Contracting Division in the Eastern Region. In this role, Wood was responsible for an annual operating budget of $350 million and more than 3,800 cross-functional employees. Wood is an active member of various industry trade organizations such as Community Transportation Association of America (CTAA) and APTA, where he also serves of the Accessibility Call Center Working Group to establish best practices for the transit industry.
